

Palm oil is an oil found in most products which is extracted from palm trees. The way this oil is obtained harms wildlife, as for it to be collected many palm trees have to be chopped down which harms the natural habitats of many animals. This product is made with sustainable palm oil, which still requires land and labour to be produced, but it is still better for the environment than traditional palm oil. However, the only way to stop palm oil from being a threat to our environment is to try and stop using it altogether.